Hello,

I would like to object to the fact that I am only able to claim 1,935.00 for the laminate flooring I purchased when really I spent 4,142.32 as I put this lament flooring throughout my entire home. I believe that anything pertaining to the cost of the flooring, except the cleaning products I purchased, should be included in this cost, per the purchase order I am enclosing. I also spent almost 3000.00 for installation bringing my cost at roughly 7,000, give or take. I am sending you copies of my invoice for the flooring I purchased, and also copies of my installation if you see fit to include it. If not, I feel I still should be able to claim the 4,142.32 for the cost of the flooring, minus the cleaning products, but would very much help if I also can recover my installation costs in case I do have to replace all the flooring in my home. By participating in this class action suit, which I very much want to do, I give up my rights to any further claims on this flooring with lumber liquidators, even though my flooring is under contract with lumber liquidators with a 50 year warranty. So you see why I would like to recover as much of my cost as possible, as I now find there is a defect also in the flooring as it is beginning to discolor with light colored spots all over the flooring., and if this continues to spread, I will need to replace the flooring in my entire home I hope you can see your way to allow me more than the 1,935.00 for my flooring, which is surely defective and will need to eventually be replaced. This class action law suit is the last attempt I have of covering my costs for this flooring. I can send you pictures of the defective spots on the floor if you need it.

Please only send any correspondence to my P.O. Box 354 Wyandotte, Michigan, as I do not get mail at my home address, and will get sent back if you send it there.

I do not plan on attending the final hearing.

Thank You

With highest regard

Mary Martin

Brazilian Cherry Select will exhibit natural variations of color from russet to reddish brown tones. It may have natural characteristics such as thin mineral streaks and small tight knots on some planks. Variations in color are a natural occurrence and extreme color change due to UV exposure is expected. There is a 10% allowance established for pieces exhibiting one or more milling/finished defects outside of the milling and grading tolerances. Extended acclimation time may be needed. Expect variations from samples to installed flooring. Pull from multiple boxes when installing. Refer to product warranty and installation instructions for details
